The revelation was given to an individual and passed on to the world in 2006. This is the first-person account: I had always had a sense of the spiritual. In my youth, I attended church quite often, Catholic, Protestant, and Evangelical. In addition, I studied other religions and philosophies. I was, however, unsatisfied that I had found the truth. The picture of the Source, or Creator, that religions painted was at odds with my personal experience of it. I found the image of a vengeful, wrathful, punishing God in direct contradiction to a creator of a remarkable universe, so perfectly in balance. I found the idea of going to God with a list of things I wanted and then waiting to see if I have been good enough to get them reflective of Santa Claus, not a source of abundance. And I found the concept of fearing God to be impossible if I was to love the creator. Fear and love can not coexist. It took decades to replace my thinking with that of the Source. I had been conditioned to believe that it thinks like we do, that the Source has emotions and moods and that those influence the outworking. But, what I came to realize is that the opposite is true; the Source is constant, steady, and reliable. Its thought doesn't change a bit, ever. In 2006, over thirty years after my wondering began and at a particularly low point in my human life, the thought was in me, It's time. It came through me, not from me. The thoughts came as complete sentences and paragraphs. The revelation was delivered to me within...
